Liberal rally. Trudeau touching down at Dartmouth High School

Justin Trudeau
THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau will be in Halifax on Friday to visit high-school students and meet with supporters.

Trudeau will address students at Dartmouth High School in the afternoon, where kids will perform a ukulele tune and stage a short play.

Trudeau will then attend a Liberal rally at Pier 21 at 6 p.m., which is a free event.

In a letter to supporters, Trudeau said Nova Scotia Liberal Leader Stephen McNeil will join him at the rally to "bring together federal and provincial Liberals to talk about the country we are building together."

He has come under attack in recent Conservative ads that say he's in "way over his head," and question the former drama teacher's political know-how.

Trudeau replied that he will never run a negative campaign, and according to a new Forum Research poll, 44 per cent of Canadians said they would vote Liberal in the next federal election. METRO

State-of-the-art check-in. Construction expected to be finished by next spring

halifax@metronews.ca

Multimillion-dollar renovations of Halifax Stanfield International Airport will pull the facility ahead of the pack in Canada, airport staff said on Thursday of infrastructure, said the airport is upgrading its baggage system, and Halifax will be the only airport in the country to have the advanced screening system in both its domestic/international and trans-border check-in halls.

"This will be one of the leading check-in halls in the country," Bouchard said, as passengers toiled luggage throughout the hall.

The upgrade is part of a $44.5-million project that will also see renovations to the check-in area and facade of the departures side of the terminal building.

Busy hub

50%

The number of passengers at the airport has grown by 50 per cent since the check-in hall was last renovated in 1998.

Bouchard said a floor-to-ceiling glass wall will complement a new raised roof — about nine metres high — in the check-in hall, which will mirror the arrivals section. The check-in counter will also be moved back about nine metres to add more self-serve check-in kiosks, a technology that the hall wasn't designed to accommodate.

"It will give us more space to revamp the layout, make better use of technology and create more circulation," Bouchard said, adding the upgrades will position the airport to meet the needs of future growth.

Construction will take place over the next year. Passengers will notice construction in the passenger drop-off and check-in areas. The work will be done in phases and signs will be posted to direct passengers.

'I want him to suffer': Mom of teen, after captor pleads guilty

Sentencing hearing.

David LeBlanc is set to appear in court on June 14

The mother of a teenage boy who was kidnapped and sexually assaulted for days says she was overwhelmed to see her son's abuser in court, admitting she wanted him to suffer after hearing him plead guilty to the charges.

With her hands shaking and emotion straining her voice, the woman said outside court that her 16-year-old son is trying to put behind him the days of captivity and abuse inflicted on him last September in a home in rural Nova Scotia.

The mother, who cannot be identified, said she didn't anticipate how difficult it would be to hear David James LeBlanc plead guilty to kidnapping, forcible confinement, sexual assault, uttering threats and breach of conditions.

"It was hard," she said. "As a mother, I just wanted to just be alone with him. I just wanted him to suffer. Normally I'm not like that, but it was just overwhelming.

"I want him to suffer."

LeBlanc, 48, entered the pleas Thursday in Nova Scotia Supreme Court in Bridgewater, where two other charges — sexual assault causing bodily harm and administering a noxious substance with intent to cause bodily harm — were withdrawn.

Slumped in a wheelchair and with his thin hands clasped on his lap, LeBlanc said he understood the charges and the maximum penalties that come with them.

"Yes, Your Honour," he said clearly when asked by the judge if he freely changed his plea to guilty.

LeBlanc was charged after a woman reported in September that a barefoot teenager arrived at her doorstep in Upper Chelsea, about 130 kilometres southwest of Halifax, chained at his wrists and ankles.

LeBlanc was arrested Sept. 30 in northern Ontario after a Canada-wide manhunt.

The boy's mother said outside court that her son went with a man on the promise of a painting job, but said he was drugged and woke up in chains. She said he escaped once and was recaptured, but finally got away.

Crown prosecutor Lloyd Tancock said the guilty pleas mean that what would have likely been a lengthy trial with up to 20 witnesses will now not go ahead.

He said it also shielded the young victim from having to testify or endure a difficult trial. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sackville man charged with driving impaired twice in 2 days

PHILIP
philip.croucher@metronews.ca

Halifax police are taking a glass-half-full approach to a Lower Sackville man allegedly being drunk behind the wheel on two straight days.

On Tuesday afternoon, police say a person reported an impaired driver leaving the Petro-Canada in Lower Sackville. Police spotted the vehicle on Hallmark Drive and the driver was arrested.

Police say the 62-year-old man's breath samples were more than three times the legal limit.

On Wednesday evening, police received another driving complaint on Hartford Drive, and saw someone turning into a home on Hallmark Drive.

Police say the same 62-year-old man was arrested again, and was again allegedly three times over the legal limit.

Halifax RCMP spokesman

Court date

The man is due to appear in Dartmouth provincial court on July 17 to face charges of impaired driving for the two incidents.

Cpl. Scott MacRae said while he was discouraged to see the same person arrested for impaired driving twice — on consecutive days, no less — the positive for the force is that in both instances the public informed police.

"If anybody suspects an impaired driver on the road, we're encouraging them to call 911, and then we'll go check it out," he said. "In this case, the same man, on two consecutive days, was caught for impaired driving."

Disturbing trends.

Experts say new ideas, culture shift needed to address alcohol use, mental-health issues among N.S. students

ruth.davenport@metronews.ca

The latest survey on drug use among students proves the status quo isn't working, health experts say.

The 2012 Nova Scotia Student Drug Use Survey shows alcohol and marijuana use haven't declined since the last survey in 2007, though tobacco use has fallen.

Nearly half of the respondents had used alcohol, and more than one-quarter reported engaging in binge drinking. More worrying was the number of students who said they had driven within an hour of having drinks or had unplanned sex while under the influence.

Chief public health officer Dr. Robert Strang said the results show the urgent need for a culture shift around the use of alcohol.

"We need to be prepared, collectively, to do things very differently," he said. "Let's learn from tobacco, where we had the courage and willingness to do some things pretty differently."

The survey also included questions about mental health for the first time, with results one expert called "dismaying."

Nearly one-quarter of the respondents met the criteria for somewhat elevated depressive symptoms, and nearly 20 per cent had seriously considered suicide in the year before the survey.

"Certainly we see many, many youth ... who come in suicidal, so that part doesn't surprise me," said Dr. Kathleen Pajer, chief of the IWK's department of psychiatry. "It was dismaying."

The minister handling several reviews related to the

Status quo isn't working, say experts

Notable points from the 2012 Nova Scotia Student Drug Use Survey:

- 43 per cent of respondents used none of the three most common substances (alcohol, cannabis, tobacco)
- 10 per cent reported using all three

- 10 per cent reported driving within an hour of having two or more drinks
- 21 per cent reported driving within an hour of cannabis use
- 7.2 per cent reported driving within an hour of using opioid pain medication
- 32 per cent engaged in unplanned sexual activity while under the influence of drugs or alcohol
- 13 per cent reported tobacco use METRO

recent suicide of Rehtaeh Parsons said the government is working to improve mental-health support.

"Over the past six weeks we have seen a collective determination to do things differently around these issues, and we have started to work differently together," said Marilyn More.

Pajer said the key to helping kids battle substance abuse and mental health disorders lies in simply being willing to talk.

"Part of a kid's job is to try new things and do risky things, but some kids get snared and other kids don't," she said. "The kids who are generally resilient ... most often have someone in their lives who they're connected to and they trust."

More than 3,100 students in Grades 7, 9, 10 and 12 took part in the survey. The complete results can be seen online at novascotia.ca/dhw.

Suicidal thoughts

"Quite frankly, it's heartbreaking and distressing to learn how many of our teenagers have thought about hurting themselves."

Marilyn More, minister for the Status of Women

No booze in stores: Top doc

Nova Scotia's chief medical officer says a proposal from the Progressive Conservative party of Nova Scotia to allow the sale of beer and wine in grocery stores would increase alcohol abuse among minors.

"We know from literature and evidence that increasing access to alcohol, privatizing the sale of alcohol would ... especially make it much more easy for youth to access and purchase alcohol," said chief public health officer Dr. Robert Strang.

The Tories released a discussion paper on Thursday asking for public input on the idea. A press release suggests taxpayers aren't getting good value from the NSLC, stating the operating expenses have doubled in the past decade, while sales have remained the same.

"The way we sell beer and wine is outdated and it's time we look at modern ways to serve customers and create jobs," PC party leader Jamie Baillie said in a release.

Finance Minister Maureen MacDonald said Thursday the PC government of John Hamm already concluded the current model best serves the interests of taxpayers, and said she has no plans to change provincial liquor laws.

Joan Jessome, president of the Nova Scotia Government & General Employees Union, also came out strongly against the idea of privatization, calling it a "desperate" attempt to create a "political wedge issue."

Victor Walk raising awareness about child sexual abuse

Inaugural event in Halifax. One in three girls and one in six boys experience unwanted sexual abuse before they are 18 years old: Release

A contingent of orange-clad Halifax-area residents looped around Citadel Hill on Thursday to raise awareness of child sexual abuse.

About 25 people donned brightly coloured T-shirts for the walk through thick fog around the downtown Halifax landmark.

The inaugural event mirrored a larger, nine-day trek by former NHL player Theo Fleury from Toronto to Ot-

Has to stop

"It happens way too much and I'm hearing about it more and more. It has to stop."

A young girl participating in the walk, who said her father is currently behind bars after being convicted of sexual abuse tawa dubbed the Victor Walk.

Fleury is raising funds for several child sexual abuse organizations and demanding the federal government impose tougher sentences on offenders.

Event organizer Kim Peters said the issue has recently come to the forefront in Nova Scotia.

She dedicated the Halifax walk to 17-year-old Rehtaeh Parsons, who committed suicide in April. Her family alleges she was sexually assaulted in 2011 and a digital photo of the incident shared around her school.

"Theo Fleury had mentioned her during his walk, so we wanted to reflect that," Peters said as she made her way down Sackville Street with the pack as music blasted through a megaphone.

A young girl participating in the walk, who did not want to be identified, said her father is currently behind bars after being convicted of sexual abuse.

"It happens way too much and I'm hearing about it more and more," she said just before hugging another participant. "It has to stop."

More than a dozen other walks have been taking place in cities across the country since Fleury started his march on May 14.

Fleury, who has spoken openly about being sexually abused by a hockey coach, was expected to arrive in the country's capital on Thursday afternoon.

Supporters take part in the local Victor Walk by marching around Citadel Hill on Thursday. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Justice says he won't rest until no-show jurors tracked down

On the hunt. Justice issues more warrants, keeps up tough talk

HALEY RYAN

A Nova Scotia Supreme Court justice says he will not be satisfied until he tracks down all the delinquent potential jurors who missed selection in the fall.

Justice Glen McDougall accepted reasons on Thursday from the three people he ordered bench warrants for this month, but asked the sheriff's office to personally summon seven more.

"I pledge I will continue these efforts until they're all brought in," McDougall said.

Stephen Richards said he only learned he was wanted by the courts when his girlfriend read his name in the newspaper.

"I had no idea I was supposed to go," Richards said in court Thursday, adding he never got the original letter or the second summons. "If I got it, I would have went."

McDougall accepted Richards' explanation, as well as those of Neil Baker and Susan Bryson before the court date.

The judge asked the sheriff's office to continue trying to find a fourth potential juror, Derek Robert Fraser, although it appears his former house is vacant.

He asked the sheriff to summon seven more people to court on June 28.

"There's too many people not taking their responsibility seriously enough, and it's become ridiculous," deputy sheriff David MacNeil said.

"I'm glad to see the courts doing the best they can."

Labour minister hopes prosecutor for workplace safety on job soon

Nova Scotia's labour minister says he would like to see a special prosecutor designated for workplace safety violations in place within a month.

Frank Corbett says the idea is a priority for the government, adding that he believes someone should be appointed to focus solely on workplace safety.

Corbett commented on workplace safety after the recent deaths of two workers in Halifax.

A 39-year-old man died Tuesday when he was electrocuted while working at a plaza on Chain Lake Drive. He was taken to hospital, where he died.

On May 9, 47-year-old Shaun Patrick McInnis was killed when he fell off a roof he was working on in Lacewood Drive in Clayton Park.

Investigation

Cops look into possible case of child luring

Police in Halifax are investigating after a man allegedly attempted to lure a child into his vehicle Thursday outside a Dartmouth elementary school.

Halifax Regional Police say officers were called to South Woodside Elementary School around noon.

They say an 11-year-old boy was on his lunch break when a man asked him to get into a black sport utility vehicle.

The boy reported the incident to school officials, who called police.

The driver is described as a white man with short grey hair, hazel eyes and a small patch of grey hair on his chin. METRO

Hockey Canada to vote on body checking

Body checking could be bounced from peewee hockey across the country starting this fall.

Hockey Canada delegates are expected to vote Saturday in Charlottetown on whether body checking should be removed for the 11- and 12-year-old players, following recent decisions by Alberta and Nova Scotia.

Failure. Lobster prices not rising since protests

One week after the Maritime lobster industry was almost shut down in a historic and massive Atlantic protest, Island fishermen are landing some staggering numbers and being paid the exact same price.

The boat tie-up, to protest low prices, grew to significant support 10 days ago when Island fishermen refused to fish over the Mother's Day weekend and were joined by Maritime counterparts. But since the protest effort tumbled like dominoes last Wednesday, little has changed.

The price is still $2.75 and $3.25, or $3 and $3.50 a pound, depending on the plant. And

Pressure's on

Some boats have been reduced to landing only 500 to 750 pounds a day in plants at both ends of the province as the pressure of lack of processing capabilities continues.

landings have been so strong, up to 2,000 to 2,500 pounds daily in some areas, processors are initiating boat quotas, which they say will provide a more orderly flow of production.

The Lakes Golf Club has landed a three-year deal to host a PGA Tour Canada event for the seven-tournament series aimed at the best young male golfers in the country.

Jeff Monday, the PGA Tour Canada president, made the announcement at the Lakes clubhouse on Thursday morning.

For the first time, the series of tournaments will be held from coast to coast, he said.

"As we were looking to build out the schedule and knew it was important to get out to the Maritimes ... the one location that continued to come up with everybody we talked to, the place you need to be is in Cape Breton," Monday said to applause from sponsors, tourism officials and golfers in attendance.

The Cape Breton Celtic Classic is scheduled for Sept. 2-8. It will be the last stop on the tour before the season-ending tour championship that is being held in London, Ont.

Monday said that means there will be a lot on the line for the golfers who play in Ben Eoin, hoping to finish among the top five overall in the series to qualify for the Web.com Tour.

"There's going to be a lot at stake on the performance of the players here and so we know it's going to be a great test," Monday said.

"The conditioning of the golf course this early in the year looks very, very impressive so I know by the time we get around to September ... the competition is going to be at its best and the weather will be superb."

Suspect in alleged VIA Rail plot wants lawyer to cite the Qur'an

Chiheb Esseghaier.

Montreal man says he does not recognize the secular Criminal Code

A man charged in the alleged plot to attack a VIA Rail passenger train says he wants to be represented by a lawyer who will use the Qur'an as a reference in his case.

"I am agreed to have a lawyer, no problem," said Chiheb Esseghaier, appearing in a Toronto court by video link from jail Thursday morning.

"But I wish this lawyer can co-operate with me, because I need the holy book as reference for my judgment. I don't want a book written by humans," he said.

The 30-year-old Montreal man told court during an earlier appearance he does not recognize the authority of the secular Criminal Code.

Police allege Chiheb Esseghaier and another man were conspiring to derail a VIA Rail passenger train. FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Both Esseghaier and 35-year-old Raed Jaser of Toronto are charged with conspiracy to murder for the benefit of a terrorist group, participating in a terrorist group and conspiring to interfere with transportation facilities for the benefit of a terrorist group.

The RCMP calls the case the first known alleged plot in Canada directed by al-Qaida.

The justice of the peace told Esseghaier he would have to discuss his wishes with his lawyer once one has been assigned.

He was scheduled to return to court June 3 to provide an update on his request.

Jaser silent on the issue

Raed Jaser also appeared by video link and was scheduled for another court appearance on June 25 as his case goes through the disclosure process.

One of his lawyers, Brydie Bethell, said outside court that she has not heard Jaser making similar remarks about the legitimacy of Canada's criminal laws.

"The client has not made any comment like that to me," she said.

Bethell said Jaser "denies all of the allegations against him" and said he is stressed but "considering the circumstances, he's doing OK." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Radicals say they know suspect in street slashing

A man seen with bloody hands wielding a butcher knife after the killing of a British soldier on the streets of London was described as a convert to Islam who took part in demonstrations with a banned radical group, two Muslim hard-liners said Thursday.

Police raided houses in connection with the slaying. In addition to the two suspects who were hospitalized after being shot by police, authorities said they had arrested a man and a woman, both 29, on suspicion of conspiracy to murder.

Authorities have not identified either of the two wounded suspects. Officials in Britain usually wait to name suspects until charges have been filed.

Anjem Choudary, the former head of the radical group al-Muhajiroun, told The Associated Press that the man depicted in a startling video of the event was named Michael Adebolajo, a Christian who converted to Islam around 2003 and took part in several demonstrations by the group.

The BBC broadcast a video from 2007 showing Adebolajo standing by Choudary at a rally.

Omar Bakri Muhammad, who now lives in Lebanon but had been a radical Muslim preacher in London, also said he recognized the man as Adebolajo and said he attended

Thursday saw the fourth night of rioting in suburbs around Stockholm, Sweden. Youths have burned down a restaurant, torched more than 30 cars and injured three police. ## Suicide attacks kill 26 in Niger

Suicide bombers in Niger detonated two car bombs on Thursday, one inside a military camp and another at a French-run uranium mine, killing 26 people and injuring 30, officials said.

A surviving attacker took a group of soldiers hostage, and authorities were attempting Thursday night to negotiate their release.

The attack on the mine was claimed by the extremist who led the attack on a gas plant in Algeria, according to a post on jihadist forums. Both attacks were claimed by MUJAO, which vowed to avenge the French-led military intervention that has challenged them in neighbouring Mali.

Breast cancer. Ont. researcher explains breakthrough

Western University's John P. Wiebe has turned up hormones that could change the way some breast-cancer patients are treated. ANGELA MULLINS/METRO IN LONDON

The lead researcher of a Western University breast-cancer study says he has identified new hormones that "may suppress breast cancer and stimulate the regression of breast tumours."

Prof. John P. Wiebe's work was recently published in the Breast Cancer Research journal.

"Basically, we've got the first explanation of what causes receptor-negative breast cancer," said Wiebe, who works in London, Ont.

There are two types of breast cancer: receptor-negative and receptor-positive.

Receptor-negative cases, which Wiebe says have the higher mortality rate of the two, do not respond to hormonal therapies such as tamoxifen. That means patients are forced into chemo or radiation therapy immediately.

Wiebe's discovery, however, could turn the tide.

Drone strikes necessary in fight against terror: Obama

Security policy. U.S. president also announces a renewed push to close Guantanamo Bay

Haunted by deaths

The president defended targeted drone killings as both effective and legal.

- He acknowledged the civilian deaths that sometimes result.
- "For me, and those in my chain of command, these deaths will haunt us as long as we live," he said.

U.S. President Barack Obama on Thursday defended America's controversial drone attacks as legal, effective and a necessary linchpin in an evolving U.S. counterterrorism policy. But he acknowledged the targeted strikes are no "cure-all" and said he is haunted by the civilians unintentionally killed.

The president also announced a renewed push to close the Guantanamo Bay detention centre in Cuba, including lifting a moratorium on prisoner transfers to Yemen. However, shutting the prison will still require help from Republicans reluctant to back Obama's call to move some detainees to U.S. prisons and try them in civilian courts.

Obama framed his address as an attempt to redefine the nature and scope of terror threats facing the U.S.

"Neither I, nor any president, can promise the total defeat of terror," Obama said in remarks at the National Defence University. "What we can do ... is dismantle networks that pose a direct danger, and make it less likely for new groups to gain a foothold."

The highly secretive program of unmanned spy drones has faced criticism from congressional lawmakers who have questioned its scope and legality. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Senate hands expense claim documents over to Mounties

Growing controversy.

Debate continues to rage over report as Sen. Mike Duffy shrugs off suggestions he should resign

The Senate has turned over documents to the Mounties to help their investigation into improper expense claims.

Senate Speaker Noel Kinsella says the RCMP's sensitive and international investigations unit is examining the claims of senators Mike Duffy, Mac Harb and Patrick Brazeau.

The police asked for documents related to the Senate's travel and expenses policies.

A debate is still raging over whether Conservatives on a committee reviewing Duffy's expenses whitewashed their report into the matter. The controversy grew Thursday as the Conservative in charge of the probe admitted he got advice from Stephen Harper's team.

Sen. David Tkachuk, one of a three-member special subcommittee studying Duffy's housing expenses, told Maclean's magazine that he spoke to people in Harper's office — including former chief of staff Nigel Wright — about the issue.

Duffy spoke out Thursday for the first time since the scandal erupted last week, insisting that he looks forward to a complete airing of all the facts and dismissing suggestions he should resign his Senate seat.

The former broadcaster literally blew out air in apparent exasperation when asked if he felt he should resign, instead saying that he'd be back at work in the Senate next week.

"Why wouldn't I?" Duffy asked reporters as he climbed into his vehicle on Parliament Hill.

'Stephen Disney' arrested over stolen park passes

Authorities say a man has been arrested after claiming to be a member of the Disney family and giving away invalid Disneyland passes.

Los Angeles County sheriff's officials say the man called himself "Stephen Disney" and had a fake driver's licence and tax forms. The statement says he gave Disneyland passes to a woman for a raffle.

Authorities say police determined the man's name is Stephen David Urquidez and the passes were stolen.

Hero will never have to pay for another burger

The man who famously put down his Big Mac to help rescue three women will never have to pay for another burger.

Charles Ramsey has been promised free burgers for life at more than a dozen Cleveland restaurants.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reports that the restaurant where Ramsey worked initially created a burger in his honour, but eateries in the city decided a larger tribute was due.

Ramsey was called a hero after helping Amanda Berry, Gina DeJesus and Michelle Knight break out of a house May 6.

Ford theatre. Toronto mayor's chief of staff gets shown the door

The chief of staff to Toronto's embattled Mayor Rob Ford was escorted by security from city hall Thursday as allegations the mayor had been caught on videotape smoking crack cocaine continued to swirl.

Mark Towhey said he did not resign but his departure had not come as a shock to him.

"The mayor and I spoke about it this afternoon," Towhey said as reporters trailed him through the underground parking lot. Towhey refused to elaborate on the conversation or say what advice he had given Ford about the alleged video.

"My conversations with the mayor are between the mayor and me," Towhey said.

Last week, both the American-based website Gawker.com and Torstar News Service reported they had seen — but not obtained — a video made by a west-end drug dealer who Gawker has been trying to raise $200,000 to buy and post the video, reaching more than $157,000 by Thursday evening.

Privacy policy. Official wants power to impose big fines on big companies

Canada's privacy commissioner Jennifer Stoddart says she's tried naming and shaming some of the world's largest companies, but it hasn't really worked. So she wants to hit them on their bottom lines.

Stoddart wants Canada's Federal Court to have the power to impose punishing penalties when organizations run afoul of privacy laws.

Pointing to a record-high $22.5-million US fine levied against Google last year by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission, Stoddart says there's no reason Canada can't be just as tough.

"That kind of fine gets the attention of the organization the way my requests to change their practices and give us a report doesn't," says Stoddart.

First of 24 victims laid to rest in town hit by tornado

New thunderstorms.

Hail, heavy rain and high winds hampering cleanup and recovery efforts that had just begun to accelerate

A band of thunderstorms battered the Oklahoma City area Thursday, slowing cleanup operations in the town where a tornado killed 24 people and destroyed thousands of homes this week.

The first of the funerals, for a nine-year-old girl killed at a Moore elementary school that took a direct hit in Monday's storm, was held Thursday morning. A family photo showed the girl, Antonia Candelaria, with a big smile and wearing a white sun hat.

Children

The medical examiner reported that six of the children who died at Plaza Towers school suffocated after being buried under a mass of bricks, steel and other materials as the building collapsed.

- A seventh child, eight-year-old Kyle Davis, was killed instantly by a large stone or a beam that struck his neck.

Early estimates indicate the tornado caused more than $2 billion US of damage in Moore. Whole subdivisions in the fast-growing community of 56,000 people were destroyed. Authorities estimated that as many as 13,000 homes were damaged or destroyed and 33,000 people were affected.

Two elementary schools were hit — one levelled — by Monday's tornado. Candelaria was one of seven children who perished at the Plaza Towers Elementary School, a one-storey building with barely a wall left standing. Altogether, 10 children were killed, including two infants.

Residents, allowed back into the damage zone, picked through enormous piles of debris. Shayne Patteson was among them, moving around the ruins of his three-bedroom home. All that was left was the tiny area where his wife hunkered down under a mattress to protect their three children when a tornado packing winds of at least 320 km/h slammed through his neighbourhood.

Ukraine court cancels first gay-pride rally

Swallow your prejudice. Event was cancelled last year due to threats from far right

A Ukrainian court on Thursday banned what would have been Ukraine's first-ever gay pride demonstration, upholding a suit by city authorities, who argued the rally would disturb annual Kiev Day celebrations and could spark violence.

The ruling dashed the hopes of Ukraine's gay and lesbian community, who planned to use the event to fight discrimination and derogatory stereotypes of gays. Last year, organizers cancelled the event at the last minute when right-wing activists gathered at its planned location, intent on beating up the participants. Still, two leading activists were brutally beaten by radicals in subsequent weeks.

While the recognition of gay rights advances in much of the West, antipathy toward homosexuals remains strong in Ukraine and other parts of the former Soviet Union. Homosexuality was a criminal offence in the USSR.

RCMP allege more fraud, corruption, bribes in Montreal

Three people have been arrested and charged in an ongoing RCMP investigation into a multimillion-dollar corruption scheme at the Canada Revenue Agency.

The charges are being laid against a chartered accountant and two former employees at the federal agency's Montreal office.

The RCMP announced Thursday that the accused are suspected of participating in a scam where the functionaries pocketed hundreds of thousands in bribes, in exchange for helping to lighten people's tax loads.

Thursday's arrests were tied to alleged crimes that, according to the police, defrauded the government of $4.5 million.

Cuba. Canadian involved in corruption probe stands trial in Havana

A Canadian businessman caught up in a corruption probe in Cuba apparently went on trial Thursday, nearly two years after he was detained and his import company, Tri-Star Caribbean, was shuttered.

Sarkis Yacoubian arrived at an Interior Ministry courthouse in Havana in a black sedan with tinted windows, and was seen being escorted inside by two men.

He did not speak to reporters, nor did Canadian Ambassador Matthew Levin, who also attended the proceedings.

Foreign journalists were not allowed access to the court, and government officials did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

President Raul Castro has repeatedly spoken of a need to root out entrenched corruption on the Communist-run island, and his anti-graft drive has swept up foreign business executives from at least five nations, as well as government officials and dozens of Cuban employees at key state-run companies.

Electronics importers say feds duped them over tariff breaks

Paper trail. Coalition says it has documents showing officials let products in duty-free, knowing levies would be claimed later on

Importers of popular electronics such as big-screen TVs and MP3 players are ramping up their fight against federal tariff changes, accusing the government of misleading them by offering tariff breaks that it planned to claw back later.

Importers of televisions are already on the hook for about $16 million in retroactive duties from 2011 after last year's crackdown on a particular tariff exemption that has become a political football.

Electronics brought to Canada under exemption 9948

The flap over electronics tariffs has also involved iPods. On Wednesday, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty was asked at a committee hearing about exemptions for iPods. GETTY IMAGES FILE are supposed to be used continuously for four years while hooked up to a computer, and importers are required to provide an "end-user certificate" proving that's how each device was used.

No such end-user certificates for consumer electronics exist, something officials at the Canada Border Services Agency have acknowledged in internal emails.

NDP reaction

- New Democrats, whom the Conservatives accused of planning an "iPod tax" in 2010, jumped on the latest revelations.
- "It's now clear that despite repeated denials, the Conservatives have been meticulously planning to impose a tax on iPods and other electronic goods and apply it retroactively," Murray Rankin, the NDP critic for National Revenue, said in a release.

ers says it has documents that prove border officials allowed them to import products duty-free, knowing the government would claim the tariffs and penalty costs at a later date.

No-fair trade. Feds may fire back over U.S. meat labelling

The federal government is threatening "retaliatory measures" against the United States in a dispute over meat-labelling rules that Ottawa and the World Trade Organization consider discriminatory.

The U.S. government has announced new regulations on so-called country of origin labelling that would track beef and hogs through the meat processing and distribution systems.

Canada objects to the labelling system on the grounds that it is costly, burdensome and will lead to the "disintegration" of the North American supply chain.

"Canada is extremely disappointed with the regulatory changes put forward by the United States today," Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz and Trade Minister Ed Fast said in a joint release Thursday.

"Canada will consider all options at its disposal, including, if necessary, the use of retaliatory measures," said the government release.

Bangladesh probe faults swampy land, poor materials for collapse

The defects and errors that led to the world's deadliest garment-industry accident extend from the swampy ground the doomed Rana Plaza was built on, to "extremely poor quality" construction materials, to the massive, vibrating equipment operating when the eight-storey building collapsed, a committee appointed by Bangladesh's government concluded.

The committee recommended life prison sentences

The disaster highlighted the hazardous working conditions in Bangladesh's $20-billion US garment industry.

Craft chain tests limits of U.S. birth-control coverage mandate

Health law. Hobby Lobby owners argue that their religious beliefs should be protected as well

In the most prominent challenge of its kind, Hobby Lobby

Stores Inc. asked a federal appeals court Thursday for an exemption from part of the federal U.S. health-care law that requires it to offer employees health coverage that includes access to the morning-after pill.

The Oklahoma City-based arts-and-crafts chain argues that businesses — not just the currently exempted religious groups — should be allowed to seek exception from that section of the health law if it violates their religious beliefs.

The owners should have their religious views protected even though they run a store that makes a profit, said Kyle Duncan, who argued before the U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals on behalf of the Green family, founders of Hobby Lobby Stores Inc. and a sister company, Christian booksellers Mardel Inc.

The stores are a “profit-making company, yes, but also a ministry,” Duncan argued.

House approves student-loan rates linked to markets

Dismissing a veto threat from President Barack Obama, lawmakers in the House passed legislation that links student loan rates to the ups and downs of the financial markets in a vote largely along party lines.

The Republican-backed bill would allow students to dodge a scheduled rate hike for students with new subsidized Stafford loans next month, but rates could rise in coming years. Democrats largely opposed the measure — which they branded the Making College More Expensive Act.

How sweet it isn't

This male German cockroach is busy checking out a flavoured test substance dyed blue by researchers. On Thursday, scientists said they had discovered why anti-cockroach products — specifically, sweet-tasting bait mixed with poison — stopped working well in the early 1990s. Turns out, the cockroaches hadn't simply lost their sweet tooth. The key, scientists say, is certain neurons that signal the brain about food. Studying how cockroaches evolve to evade our poisons may provide clues to designing bait that the critters cannot resist.

HANGING JERSEY A SIGN OF HOPE

1 YouTube Comedy Week. The future of comedy is on display this week as YouTube's first annual Comedy Week showcases the best funny stuff on its channel, with its comic stars like Jenna Marbles, Smosh, Epic Meal Time and Danisnotonfire — who all became famous there. Lesson? Instead of hitting amateur comedy clubs or driving to L.A. in your beat-up Jeep, just go on YouTube to showcase your talent.

2 Boston Rob. Reality fans love him for his appearances on Survivor (he was "sole survivor" in Season 22) and The Amazing Race. Well now Rob Mariano, a.k.a. Boston Rob, has released a book called The Boston Rob Rulebook: Strategies for Life, based around his strategic thinking and social awareness that you can apply to your own life. Because life is really one big game of survivor.

3 Tumblr says Yahoo! In its continued efforts to put itself on the map again, Yahoo bought media network Tumblr for $1.1 billion US. This could be a huge move in Yahoo's comeback attempt, as CEO Marissa Mayer tries to breathe new life into this Internet icon. Now this will definitely make Yahoo hipper, though some may equate purchasing indie Tumblr as selling out to aging hipsters.

4 @ThatEricAlper. With 127,000-plus followers on Twitter, Canadian music expert Eric Alper links to some of the best music/pop culture gems on the web, from 50 albums to play after a breakup, to nine people who were banned from Saturday Night Live, to a super-cut of film characters screaming "Noooooooooooo!" Follow him to be a cool cat.

5 Roboteyes. This synthpop band calls themselves "the soundtrack to the greatest John Hughes movie never made." With their new-wave-era sound, roboteyes' self-titled debut is well worth a listen at roboteyes.bandcamp.com. Their song Break My Heart should be a hit song. It would have been in the '80s.

6 Buzzfeed. It's one of the hottest news sites on the planet right now, and what it does better than anyone is capture and fuel posts going viral — whether it's pictures of cute cats, photo bombs, YouTube videos or breaking news. Buzzfeed gets that people want to discover and share things — from the silly to the serious and everything in between.

7 MS Walk. MS Walks happen in 160 communities across Canada, bringing together people who have been impacted by multiple sclerosis and raising money for research and support programs. I'm walking in one this Sunday in Peterborough, Ont., with my wife and kids in support of our friend who has been battling the disease. Learn more about these walks at mswalks.ca.

8 Hadfield's space guitar. Chris Hadfield didn't just make space travel really cool — he also made more people want to be guitar heroes. After Hadfield performed Bowie's Space Oddity in space while playing a Vancouver-made Larrivée guitar, that guitar has now been brought back into production for a limited run due to demand. The first guitar rock star on Mars could be you.

9 Kevin Durant. His jersey was photographed hanging amidst the rubble from the tornado in Moore, Okla. And the NBA star proved once again how down-to-Earth and charitable he is when he donated $1 million US to help the recovery efforts there. His Oklahoma City Thunder and the NBA soon followed suit, donating $1 million as well.

10 Teens and Twitter. A new study from the Pew Research Center reveals Twitter is becoming a go-to social-media destination for teens who say there is too much drama (and parent surveillance) on Facebook. When parents see this, they will get on Twitter and start following their kids there. Dear teens, there is no escape in the social-media world either. Now go clean your rooms.

11 Avery. Speaking of teens, my daughter Avery becomes a teenager next week — yes, she turns 13. I always wanted to give her a shout-out on this list — I love her so much (and my youngest daughter, Chloe). So Avery, there you go. Cool Dad? Yeah, OK, maybe. Now go clean your room.

Synopsis

Picking up where Fast Five left off, when we first meet Dom Toretto (Vin Diesel) and company, they are wealthy outlaws, living in countries with no extradition to the U.S. Their quiet lives are disrupted when a gang led by super villain Owen Shaw (Luke Evans) stages a daring raid that threatens international security. A task force led by Luke Hobbs (Dwayne Johnson) calls on the expertise of the furious fugitives to help bring Shaw to justice.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Could crash test dummies stand in for the cast of Fast & Furious 6? HANDOUT

Fast & Furious medley

Nothing new. Now at the half-dozen mark, auto action series' latest film is more like a greatest hits mashup than its own creation

Richard: Mark, this is the culmination of the previous five. A greatest hits — literally, there are some wild crashes here — featuring characters from most of the films in the series. All the old faves are back — drug lord Braga, Hobbs and even Letty who was presumed dead in the last instalment — in a story that doesn't make a great deal of sense, but if it was supposed to make sense it would be called Sedans and Sensibility or maybe Of Miatas and Men. But no, this is a Fast & Furious movie that plays fast and furious with believability but still delivers a pretty good time at the movies. What's your take?

MB: SPOILER ALERT: THERE ARE CAR CRASHES IN THIS MOVIE. Richard, I'm so glad we got a sixth instalment of the franchise because somehow there were just too many unexplored nuances in the first five. But if it's action you're after, you won't be disappointed. You're right; the story is secondary; in fact, almost irrelevant. But the relationships among the characters also seem unimportant here. There seemed to be more emotional connection in Fast and Furious 2, 3, and 5 — or was it 1, 3, and 4? Anyway, you get my point. But things certainly go boom.

RC: They sure do. The action scenes here feature the fanciest stunt driving this side of Evel Knievel. To quote the movie, "We're talking vehicular warfare!" And that's what people want to see from these movies. Sure the talk of friendship and loyalty is the overriding theme, but that wouldn't mean much if cars don't become airborne before they burst into flames. What did you think of Vin Diesel?

MB: SPOILER ALERT: THERE ARE FIST FIGHTS IN THIS

MOVIE. Richard, Vin Diesel has less personality than some of the cars. And Paul Walker must have been cast ages ago to make him look like a trained actor. The truth is, I'd watch these movies if they used crash test dummies in the leads. The pyrotechnics are dazzling and the cars are great to look at. Toward the end of the film there's a stunt that's so breathtaking it transcends the actors involved. So Diesel is as good as the film needs him to be.

RC: I liked how every line he speaks sounds as though he's dragging it through sandpaper.

MB: If there were ever a guy who needed auto-tune, it's Vin Diesel.

Animation

Epic

Director. Chris Wedge

Stars. Colin Farrell,
Josh Hutcherson

Parents, get ready for an epic disappointment. Though colourful and exciting enough for the kids, most of the celebrity cast phone in lacklustre voice performances, and the computer animation just isn't spectacular enough to compensate. The story — about little forest people battling an evil corrupter of nature — ends up feeling like a low-rent FernGully (if you remember that one), without the environmental message. Funny guys Aziz Ansari and Jason Sudeikis stand out, and bring the only laughs for the over-10 crowd.

COLIN MCNEIL

Comedy

The Hangover Part III

Director. Ami Ayalon, Avi Dichter

Stars. Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms, Zach Galifianakis

The first Hangover movie was a dark, hilarious look at a bachelor party gone horribly wrong. After an unfunny carbon-copy sequel the series ends with a heist film, sans the monkey and, unfortunately, most of the laughs. This time the Wolfpack are coerced by a gangster into tracking down Mr. Chow (Ken Jeong) and gold bricks worth $21 million. Part three is as vulgar as the first two, but the story is stuck in limbo somewhere between heist flick and comedy.

Judging a book by its cover?

Movie tie-ins. A big screen adaptation of a novel can boost book sales, but does it influence our reading experience?

Book lovers who haven't yet read The Great Gatsby but hope to do so before seeing the new Baz Luhrmann film adaptation may still find themselves being influenced by the Hollywood machine.

Like many novels that are adapted for the big screen, the 1925 F. Scott Fitzgerald literary classic has been reprinted with a movie tie-in cover featuring the stars — in this case, a tuxedo-clad Leonardo DiCaprio looming over his castmates in all their Roaring Twenties glamour.

While movie tie-in books can drive sales of novels, they can also irk some readers who find their imaginations tainted by the cinematic interpretations depicted on the cover.

"When you read the

Do the faces of big stars pop into your mind when you're reading? HANDOUT book, it doesn't matter how they describe that character, you're most likely going to see the cover character," author David Korinetz, who runs the book distribution company Red Tuque Books in Penticton, B.C., said in a telephone interview.

Still, he said he's not bothered by movie tie-ins, noting they do what a cover is supposed to do — attract the eye.

"If I see a book sitting there and it's got an actor I recognize, I will most likely pick it up to see what it's about," said Korinetz, who's self-published three fantasy books.

"It would make no difference to me, one way or the other, whether I'm going to enjoy the book or whether I would buy it. I think it's effective and I don't think there's any stigma."

Author Alison Wearing, who recently published the memoir

Big sales

Bahram Olfati, vice-president of procurement for books at Indigo Books & Music Inc., says every time there's a movie tie-in for a book, "sales go through the roof, regardless of the cover, especially if the movie is a blockbuster."

Confessions of a Fairy's Daughter, feels differently.

"It cheapens the experience of the book for me. It commercializes it," said the Stratford, Ont.-based writer/performer.

"I'm far, far, far less inclined to pick up a book if the cover has some sort of movie reference, even though I would have very happily picked up that novel."

"I often actually look for the old version. I'll look for it in a second-hand book store before I'll buy that new flashy, Hollywood version, because that's what it feels like."

What's hot this summer

The summer movie season has begun on theatre screens across the country. September will mark the beginning of Oscar season, but from now until August our minds are free to turn to sun-bleached mush — and occasionally take in brainier fare.

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York

This is the End

What: The Apatow boys play “themselves” at a Hollywood party taking place during the apocalypse. Not to be confused with Edgar Wright's forthcoming The World's End, which is also a drunken comedy about the apocalypse.

Why: Michael Cera and others get amusingly offed.

Why not: The Apatow clan has been running a bit on fumes lately. A self-referential, val-edictory romp after a string of bombs seems a bit desperate.

The Bling Ring

What: Sofia Coppola returns with her version of a crime saga about girls, led by Emma Watson, who use the Internet to track celebrities' whereabouts and rob their homes.

Why: Sofia Coppola has her problems, but they're often the same as her gifts. No one makes movies like her, which is to say that no one is making films about the insularity of privilege with the actual insight into the insularity of privilege.

Why not: “Paris Hilton as herself.”

Berberian Sound Studio

What: Toby Jones plays a sound designer hired by questionable Italian producers to work on a “giallo” — sleazy Italian thriller film prevalent during the '70s.

Why: Director Peter Strickland ably captures the “giallo” mood.

Is World War Z worth missing a summer night for? HANDOUT

Why not: This isn't for everybody. Is that a negative?

White House Down

What: Remember that movie that just came out where 1600 Pennsylvania Ave was invaded? This is totally different.

Why: Channing Tatum as a secret service agent.

Why not: Roland Emmerich last made a movie about how Shakespeare didn't write the works of Shakespeare.

Frances Ha

What: Noah Baumbach (The Squid and the Whale) reunites with his Greenberg leading lady/It Girl Greta Gerwig for this low-budget, B&W ode to the French New Wave.

Why: Baumbach is an acerbic genius and Gerwig is refining her unique, laid-back screen presence with every film, without becoming a stock ingenue.

Why not: Baumbach needs to reunite with his Kicking and Screaming stars, including Chris Eigeman, Carlos Jacott and Josh Hamilton. Just because.

Much Ado About Nothing

What: Hot off directing the third highest grossing film ever (The Avengers), Joss Whedon turns to Shakespeare, the second greatest writer ever (after Stan Lee, of course), with some of his usuals (Nathan Fillion, Amy Acker) filling out the Bard's comedy of errors.

Why: Even if everyone's terrible, it's still Much Ado About Nothing.

Why not: Some of the cast are reportedly terrible. And even with Keanu Reeves, it would be hard to top Kenneth Branagh's 1993 version.

After Earth

What: M. Night Shyamalan sucks into his orbit fellow Philadelphian Will Smith and his son Jaden, who play humans returning to a post-apocalyptic earth in a film that is in no way Oblivion.

Why: Will Smith is a very good actor.

Why not: You know what? M. Night Shyamalan is too easy to mock. Let's hope he's found a premise that will actually drive his creative juices, as with Signs — but without the garbage ending, as with Signs.

Sequels — or suck-quels — come in few flavours. Some — like Star Wars — continue a storyline; some — like Home Alone 2 — hit repeat. Others, like the James Bond and the Fast and the Furious films, help a franchise endure by adapting for the times and swapping out stars as they age or move on. Very few completely change course midstream. With The Hangover Part III not being about a hangover, we round up films that messed with the formula, and some failed.

MATT PRIGGE

Metro World News in New York City

Sudden Impact (1983)

Clint Eastwood first embodied rebel cop "Dirty" Harry Callahan. The five-film series has mostly been helmed by genre directors of varying quality. For the fourth, Eastwood — a more laid-back and filmmaker — took over. The result is a slower film than the rest where Harry is unusually empathic with the murdering female character whom historically he would have gunned down. Regardless, it's the series' biggest grosser.

Deviated sequels

Universal Soldier: Day of Reckoning (2012)

When few were looking, Universal Soldier — a modest hit for Jean-Claude Van Damme back in 1992 — lived on as a direct-to-video mainstay about a cyborg fighter. Anyone who caught up with its sixth entry would have been shocked to find that it barely resembles the original. Now Van Damme is the bad guy and the star is some guy (Scott Adkins) on a routine revenge mission. Most different of all, this John Hyams film is very well-made and a lot of fun.

Babe: Pig in the City (1998)

There could have easily been endless nice films about Babe, the talking pig, on his farm with other talking animals. But the first sequel killed this prospect by taking our pig into a mega-metropolis and going dementedly creepy and wonderfully dark. Parents famously freaked, and the film tanked, but most kids would adore it.

Evil Dead 3 - Army of Darkness (1992)

Evil Dead goes medieval! Bruce Campbell's Ash, the survivor of The Evil Dead and its comic sequel/sortar-remake, was suddenly whisked to the Middle Ages for no reason other than, "Wouldn't that be kind of awesome if a gorefest series did that?"

Halloween III: Season of the Witch (1982)

John Carpenter originally envisioned that his series would boast new villains in every film. But even though the first sequel brought back Michael Myers, the third adhered to this vision, thus confusing everyone when the baddie turned out to be 62-year-old Dan O'Herlihy, playing the owner of a Halloween costume manufacturer hell-bent on domination.

Moore than a number: Would you ask the men these questions?

Julianne Moore is getting tired of the double standard for women when it comes to getting older in Hollywood. "Men aren't asked about age. Men aren't asked about their children," she tells DuJour magazine. "Not that these things aren't important, but I do feel like it becomes reductive when a woman's life becomes, 'Talk to me about your kids and how you feel about plastic surgery.'" Still, Moore doesn't want to sound like she's complaining, as she's thrilled to have had the career she's already had: "If I saw myself sitting here at 52, talking about my career and how I've been doing it for the last 30 years, I'd be like, 'Are you kidding me? It happened?'"

Amanda Bynes

Bynes boils over allegedly altered photos

Amanda Bynes is not happy with how In Touch Weekly has been portraying her, and who can blame her when the cover story on her gets a "Destroyed by fame" headline? But that's not why Bynes is up in arms. The magazine apparently used "fake altered photos" with the story "because they f—ing hate me," Bynes explained on Twitter. (The magazine also claimed to have photos taken inside Bynes' New York City apartment.)

"They used an old shot of me on the cover with a bad angle of my old nose before I had surgery to reshape my profile and to remove the webbing from my eyes," Bynes tweeted. "I have to sue because that's not my apartment, those aren't my clothes!"

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

My first name ain't Baby, it's Billionaire

Janet Jackson isn't doing too bad for herself: After several decades in the entertainment industry, the singer and actress has reportedly hit billionaire status, according to Variety.

Jackson's income has included $458 million for concert tours, $260 million from album sales and $304 million for film and TV work, plus more than $81 million from sponsorship deals.

With the new income milestone, Jackson joins an elite club that also includes her husband, Wissam Al Mana, who became a billionaire thanks to investments in the Middle East.

Kristen Stewart

Stewart wasn't so Swift to seek out Taylor's sympathy

OK, so maybe Kristen Stewart didn't seek breakup advice from Taylor Swift after all. Despite reports earlier this week, sources insist to E! News that the Twilight actress did not in fact hightail it to Swift's Beverly Hills home in the wake of her split from Robert Pattinson. "They know each other and they are friends, but they didn't see each other," a source says of the young women.

Taco, the next generation

Top chefs share their ideas for making over everyone's favourite build-it-yourself meal

Cali Vegetarian

Santa-Barbara-based food and garden blogger Valerie Rice (Eat Drink Garden) uses lentils as the base for her taco, simmering them with tomato, garlic, red pepper, and a dash each of cumin and smoked paprika. The lentils get packaged in a soft corn tortilla and topped with items such as roasted tomatillo salsa and guacamole. "My first go-round with these I wasn't sure how it would go over with my meat-loving husband and sometimes picky daughters," Rice wrote in an email. "But they were a total hit and now are part of our dinnertime rotation."

Persian-Inspired

Toss shredded chicken in a sauce of pomegranate molasses, lime juice and honey. Stuff the meat into a taco shell (or wrap it in a flour tortilla or even Middle Eastern flatbread) and top with yogurt, fresh basil, mint, scallions, tomato, cucumber and plenty of sumac. "This is a classic combination of Persian ingredients," Louisa Shafia, author of The New Persian Kitchen, wrote in an email. "Crushed purple sumac berries are tart and salty and a must have for conjuring the authentic flavour of Middle Eastern cuisine."

Pig-in-a-Taco

Stick a pork tenderloin in the slow cooker until it practically melts, suggests Marie Simmons, author of the new cookbook, Taste of Honey. Shred the meat, then toss it with a sweet-spicy barbecue sauce made by simmering honey, chipotle peppers packed in adobo sauce, ketchup, soy sauce, cumin, chili powder, garlic and a swig of cider vinegar for about 10 minutes, or until thick. Top the taco with avocado, thinly sliced radishes and a shredded jicama-and-carrot slaw dressed with chopped cilantro and lime juice.

Steak House

Season a flat-iron steak with salt and pepper, then sear it on the grill, suggests Washington, D.C. chef Spike Mendelsohn, who plans to open a steak frites restaurant called Bearnaise this summer. Wrap thin slices of the steak and pickled red onions inside a soft corn taco and serve with warm Bearnaise sauce for dipping. "I love the idea of eating a steak without sharpening my knives," Mendelsohn said via email. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Counting calories

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

I never thought I'd see the day when calorie-counting would be the latest wine trend.

After all, the belly-expanding issue with booze comes from its sugar and alcohol. Wines tend to have low quantities of both, with the average white or red containing about 140 calories per five ounce glass.

I guess when you're watching your weight even that can equal lots of squats. Who came to the rescue? Why, a former real housewife of New York City.

Bethenny Frankel, reality star and business mogul, started her Skinnygirl line of adult beverages so she could enjoy a guilt-free Margarita. After her company sold for bags of dough, the concept was unleashed on wine lovers.

At 100 calories per five ounce serving, the Skinnygirl 2011 California Red ($14.99) hasn't downplayed the alcohol (a respectable 12 per cent) in its freshly crushed blackberry fruit flavour that ends with a bright, juicy finish.

While it's a chillable red that will match with most summertime menus, the skinny on this girl is that she may taste best all by herself. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

EDNA

Me time with EDNA

Inspired by the life and poetry of Edna St. Vincent Millay, this new nook of the north end, (2053 Gottingen St.) Edna is a 60-seat neighbourhood restaurant to come, eat, drink, and, according to owner Jenna Moores, just nourish yourself. Said to feature fresh and playful foods along with its creative cocktails, all products are locally sourced and high quality. Grab some friends for a great evening out or sit and have "me" time with EDNA. Visit: ednarestaurant.com

2 DOORS DOWN

New Eats: 2 Doors Down

From the fine folk that brought us Chives Bistro comes 2 Doors Down, the new restaurant at 1533 Barrington St. — literally two doors down from Chives. It features comfort food and, just like its big brother, is inspired by Canada's seasons and culture. With creative dishes for the meat, seafood, vegetable, and general glutinous foodie in all of us, I intend to knock off about 10 pounds and then go try their buttermilk-fried chicken. Finger lickin' good. Visit: go2doorsdown.com

Last chance: Legally Blonde the Musical

The curtain drops on Elle Woods' triumphant run on the Neptune stage this Sunday. Don't miss your chance to catch the last of Neptune Theatre's 50th anniversary season with this amazing musical. Colourful, energetic, and featuring hilarious songs such as Gay or European. So, like, get your tickets now and don't miss out! ... Oh, unless you don't like fun. Do you not like fun? Oh. Then nevermind. As you were. Visit: neptunetheatre.com

Have a dark, dark Friday night

Dark for Dark takes over Company house Friday night at 8:30 to release their debut album, Warboats and they are inviting you to celebrate. This special evening will also feature some amazing performances by special guests such as Klarka Weinwurm and the explosive theatre-filling Bend the River, who bring a dynamic stage show and offer something unique and very musical. All for eight bucks? A steal.

On Stage: The Band Before Time

The Band Before Time, according to their Facebook page, has been facilitating inebriated good times through their love, party jams and sarcastic shenanigans for a long while. These five childhood companions have always been chalk-full of music, and Friday night they're going to let it all hang out at Michael's Bar. Alongside Floodland, Banded Stilts, E.B. Anderson & The Resolutes, and Pat Bethune, the evening should kick off at 9 p.m. and bring in Saturday still rocking.

Don't be late for the bus

The Young Thrillionaires, in conjunction with The Bus Stop Theatre and CKDU 88.1FM Go Time!, are proud to present The Late Bus. Taking place Friday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., The Late Bus is a hybrid of a late night talk show and variety show. Can you imagine if, like, the Carol Burnett Show collided with The Daily Show with Jon Stewart? Take a moment and breathe that in. Now let it out. And go buy your tickets for this comedy/spoken work/animals/cooking smorgasbord of a show.

MacKinnon making a Memorial Cup statement

Nathan MacKinnon moves the puck against the Winterhawks on Saturday in Saskatoon. LIAM RICHARDS/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Leaving a lasting impression. Former NHLer-turned-scout says Mooseheads star much more than a sniper

ANDREW RANKIN
andrew.rankin@metronews.ca

Basil MacRae is impressed with a lot more about Nathan MacKinnon than just his Memorial Cup-leading eight points.

The former NHL tough guy turned Columbus Blue Jackets scout admits he's witnessed a very rare talent in the Halifax Mooseheads forward.

"When he's on the ice, he's always noticeable," said MacRae of the Cole Harbour hockey product.

"It's not that it's always a highlight-reel play. He blocks shots. He's great at faceoffs. For me he's a 17-year-old kid who looks like he's 22 or 23 years old — he's very mature and is beyond his years."

So far, MacKinnon has answered all of his critics with his all-around performance at the Memorial Cup, emerging as the Herd's biggest leader at the tournament.

But MacKinnon insists he didn't come into the four-team event putting specific expectations on himself.

"What I wanted to do is bring my game and be the best I could possibly be, and I figured that would produce results by just playing my hardest and sticking to my strengths," said the projected No. 2 pick in June's NHL draft.

"If I came here trying to prove that I'm the first pick, or trying to lead the tournament or score 100 goals, I don't think I'd be doing well right now. I'm just trying to keep it simple. So far so good."

MacKinnon rose to the occasion in the Mooseheads' 7-4 round-robin victory against the projected No. 1 pick Seth Jones and the Portland Winterhawks, finishing with three goals and an assist.

Although MacKinnon outduelled Jones, MacRae resisted reading too much into it.

"They're just two totally different players," he said. "Both are going to be great NHL players. It always takes a little longer for bigger defencemen to develop to take to know the game."

And, while both players gun for a title, MacRae's hoping they can remain in the moment.

"Enjoy the journey and the ride; when you're drafted you're no longer a kid, you're a man."

Quoted

"Yes, he's a heck of a talent, a heck of a player. I never met the kid but he seems like he'd be a great kid, too."

Finding that work-play balance

Memorial Cup. Herd looking to keep their emotions in check while waiting for Sunday's championship

ANDREW RANKIN
Metro in Saskatoon

Who could blame the Halifax Mooseheads if they chose to spend Thursday night obsessing over the Memorial Cup final?

As the tournament's top team during the round-robin, the Herd earns a spot in Sunday's matchup and is also rewarded with three long days off to consider the prospects of junior hockey supremacy.

But after Thursday's team skate, the No. 1-ranked team in the country just wanted to forget about hockey for the day. What better way than a team outing to the movies to take in the ridiculously outlandish The Hangover Part III?

As the Herd counts down to the big day, players are looking to strike that perfect balance of work and play to ensure they enter Sunday's game relaxed and supremely focused.

"It's winner take all," said Mooseheads forward Darcy Ashley. "We talked about it amongst ourselves a little bit and we want to leave everything on the ice. The worst thing you can ever have is regret."

Having two Memorial Cup appearances under his belt, Mooseheads veteran forward Stephen MacAulay has seen it all.

"There's a lot of pressure but at the end of the day you just have to keep reminding yourself that it's just a game," MacAulay said. "We don't want to downplay it. We just want to try to be relaxed and enjoy the moment. Hangover III might help, maybe."

In his last year of junior eligibility with the team, MacAulay will play his last game as a Moosehead on Sunday.

The popular veteran knows how lucky he is, but the Cole Harbour native is hungry for more.

"To go out on a stage like this would be phenomenal."

As the big day draws closer and the pressure mounts, MacAulay will remain the steadfast rock he's been for the Herd since joining the team mid-season.

"I'm just trying to be a calming presence," he said. "I don't want to be too over the top but any way I can help, I'll try."

Halifax Mooseheads forward Stephen MacAulay speaks to reporters at the Credit Union Centre on Thursday.

Knights dominate dull Blades

Bo Horvat scored on a short-handed penalty shot in the first period and Jake Patterson made 32 saves on Thursday as the London Knights defeated the host Saskatoon Blades 6-1 in the tiebreaker game at the MasterCard Memorial Cup.

London now takes on the Portland Winterhawks in Friday's semifinal.

The winner of the Portland-London game earns a berth in Sunday's title game against the Halifax Moose-heads.

Chris Tierney, with a goal and an assist, Seth Griffith, Ryan Rupert, Kyle Platzer and Nikita Zadorov had the other goals for the OHL champions. Alex Broadhurst added two assists, while Horvat chipped in with one of his own.

Patterson, who was pulled after allowing five goals in the first period of Tuesday's 9-2 round-robin loss to Halifax, was rarely tested by a sluggish Blades team.

Nathan Burns scored for Saskatoon, which got 31 saves from Andrey Makarov before being replaced by Alex Moodie after the sixth London goal.

Leading 1-0 after Horvat's goal, the Knights pulled away with two quick strikes during a 49-second span in the second. Griffith walked around Saskatoon's Collin Valcourt on a power play and roofed a shot past Makarov at 11:28 before Max Domi fed Tierney for a one-timer at 12:17.

The Knights then put the game to bed early in the third. Rupert scored on a feed from in close from Tierney at 2:16. Platzer made it 5-0 just 37 seconds later and Zadorov stretched the lead to six at 3:22.

Burns broke Patterson's shutout bid on a nice backhand move at 11:20 for Saskatoon's only highlight on a dismal night for the hosts.

T.J. Grant: 'I got a job to do'

UFC 160. Cole Harbour fighter gearing up for the biggest MMA fight of his career

PHILIP
CROUCHER
philip.croucher@metronews.ca

T.J. Grant knows this isn't just another fight.

A win on Saturday night at UFC 160 against the talented Gray Maynard, and Grant gets a shot at Benson Henderson's lightweight title.

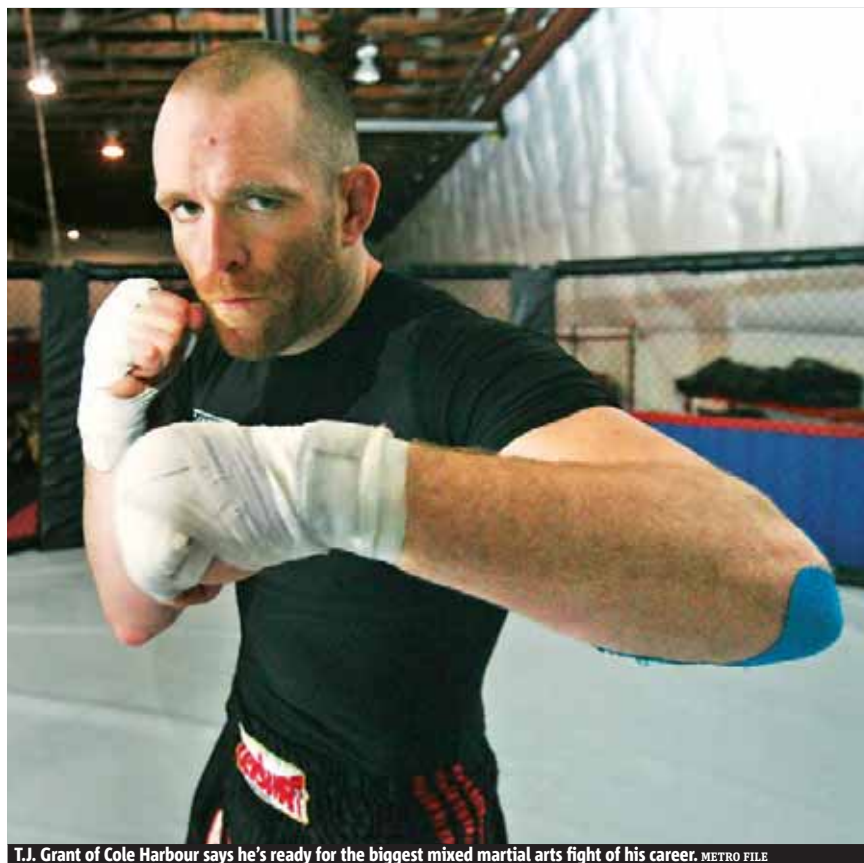

It's a position he's never been in before, and it's one most MMA fighters can only dream about.

Still, with so much riding on this fight, Grant is doing his best to not look too far ahead. He's preparing for a 15-minute war against Maynard before a sold-out crowd at the MGM Grand Arena in Las Vegas, and is ready to do whatever it takes to get his arm raised in victory.

"I got a job to do and it's the only way I'm treating it right now," said the 29-year-old Grant, prior to leaving for Las Vegas earlier this week.

"I know what the boss said and what's at stake, but at the same time, I'm just thinking about what I have to do to go out there and win this fight. I'm not really thinking ahead."

The boss — UFC president Dana White — announced last month that the winner

T.J. Grant of Cole Harbour says he's ready for the biggest mixed martial arts fight of his career. METRO FILE of the Grant-Maynard fight would get a shot at the lightweight title.

It has made what was already Grant's biggest fight to date even bigger. The bout will mark the first time Grant has appeared on a UFC pay-per-view, as he will be the second bout of a card that gets underway at 11 p.m.

Grant is calling his fight against Maynard "the toughest test of my career."

"I'm definitely not going to take this lightly," he said.

"That's all the motivation I need to go in and fight Gray Maynard. He's going after what I want. I want to forward my career and this is the next step."

Grant couldn't go into a fight with much more con-

Rangers live to play another day

NHL playoffs. Kreider nets overtime winner but New York still trails Boston 3-1 in series

Chris Kreider proudly wore the Broadway Hat in the victorious New York Rangers dressing room as he tried to describe the feeling of saving his team's season.

Kreider deftly steered in a pass from Rick Nash 7:03 into overtime, and the Rangers played alive in the Stanley Cup playoffs with a 4-3 victory over the Boston Bruins on Thursday night.

"It is so surreal," the 22-year-old Kreider said. "It's not something that can really be explained. It is something that just has to be felt, but it was awesome. I'm just excited to give these guys an opportunity to play another game. "There is no quit in this room."

New York, which erased 2-0 and 3-2 deficits, still trails the Eastern Conference semifinal series 3-1. The Rangers will need to win again on Saturday in Boston to force Game 6 back in Madison Square Garden.

Derek Stepan and Brian Boyle scored tying goals in the third period for the Rangers, who even found success on the power play. Carl Hagelin netted New York's first goal of the game in the second period.

Boston got second-period goals from Nathan Horton and rising star Torey Krug to build an early lead. Tyler Seguin's first of the playoffs put the Bruins back on top 3-2 in the third. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wings in control over Hawks

Jakub Kindl scored on a power play in the second period, Daniel Cleary had an empty-net goal and Jimmy Howard made 27 saves to help the Detroit Red Wings hold on for a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks on Thursday night, putting the NHL's best team during the regular season on the brink of elimination.

- After losing Game 1, the Red Wings have surged into control of the second-round series by handing Chicago its first three-game losing streak of the year. Game 5 is Saturday night in Chicago. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Why are you making a simple situation so difficult? Whatever the reason, you need to realize that, at the moment, you are your own worst enemy. Try looking at life from a more positive perspective today.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Before you make an important decision, make sure you have covered all the angles and not left any loose ends that might trip you up. The devil, as always, is in the details.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Your larger-than-life personality will get a boost from today's Venus-Mercury link in your sign. Someone who was hoping you might take a lower profile will be disappointed.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

If someone seems to be taking too much of an interest in your private affairs, you must tell them to get lost. You may have to say it more than once, and louder than you would like, before they get the message.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You are not the first person to walk a certain path, so why not make your journey easier by following in the footsteps of those who have been there and done it before you?

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

At some stage today, it will be obvious that going it alone is not an option. You need the help of people whose talents in certain areas are superior to your own. Success is mainly about co-operation.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You will indulge even more so than usual over the next 24 hours. The good things in life are there to be enjoyed and you have every intention of getting your share — and then some.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It may feel as if the pressure is building and because of the approaching eclipse you won't be as self-assured as you usually are, but there is no need to panic. It will all turn out right in the end.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Are you taking someone for granted? According to the planets you are and what happens today will remind you how much you owe them emotionally. Make an effort to remind them you care.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You need to keep your wishful thinking under control. Even though you are down-to-earth by nature, you do enjoy your flights of fancy. Just make sure you don't fly too high.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Today's Venus-Mercury link in the most creative area of your chart urges you to do something of an artistic nature. What is it you enjoy doing more than anything else? Make time for it in your schedule.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

If you want something, you will find a way to get it — even if you know it is wrong. That's your choice to make, but what might it do to people you love? Think carefully. SALLY BROMPTON
